

The Center for Psychiatric Rehabilitation is conducting a research study that explores the relationship between mothers with major depression and their adult daughters. We are especially interested in learning about the way that depression affects how mothers and daughters communicate with, support, and feel about one another. We would like to interview mothers with major depression and their adult daughter (18 years of age and older) separately. Participation in this study involves a 90 minute telephone or face-to-face interview, depending on what is most convenient for you. Each participant will receive $30.00 for her time. All information from the interviews is strictly confidential. We will not share any information from you with your daughter or vice versa.

Please contact Dr. Marie Mesidor (617)-353-1113 ext 6 or mmesidor@bu.edu to learn how to participate. Click here to read the recruitment flyer for this research study: <http://www.bu.edu/cpr/research/participate/mother-daughter-study.pdf>
