

Richard Baron, M.A.

Richard Baron has more than forty years of experience in the field of health and human services, including program management, research and evaluation, policy analysis, professional training and public education. He serves as Co-Director of Knowledge Translation activities for the UPENN Collaborative on Community Integration of Individuals with Psychiatric Disabilities.

He is the former Executive Director of Matrix Research Institute, a research and training center focused on employment programs and policies targeted to people with disabilities. Mr. Baron served for eight years as the Director of the federally funded RRTC on work and reintegration. Richard Baron also has been the principal investigator on numerous federally funded research, training and demonstration programs, and has participated in the development and assessment of state and local human service policies. He has conducted research supported by National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research Switzer Fellowship Program, completing a unique qualitative assessment of the long-term career patterns of people with serious mental illness and a study of the use of career training resources by people with mental illness.
